Britain Sends Ships to Guiana

Britain's 8,000-ton cruiser, the Superb, has arrived at Georgetown, British Guiana, with 600 troops aboard to quell a possible Red insurrection. Governor of the colony, Sir Alfred Savage, has been given authority to oust the Moscow-trained leaders of the People's Progressive Party, newly elected to power and seeking self-government. If trouble leads to open revolt, supplies of bauxite, from which aluminum is manufactured, may stop coming to Canadian aluminum plants. British Guiana is the principal source of bauxite for all Canadian aluminum manufacturers. (Central Press Canadian.)

Harding, Bonner Clash Over Doukhobor Action

Secreds Held Taking Every Sensible Step

The provincial government is taking "every step dictated by good common sense" to solve the Sons of Freedom problem, Attorney-General Robert Bonner declared Thursday night in the legislature.

There could be no overnight solution to the problem, he said, and in fact there was no guarantee that any program of action that could be launched by the province would have the slightest effect on the radical Freemodites.

The attorney-general, winding up the throne speech debate, rebuked CCF critic Randolph Harding who earlier in the day had blasted the government for lack of action on the Sons.

Mr. Bonner staunchly defended the Doukhobor policy of his government. It was doing everything it could to cope with the problem, and no one—including Mr. Harding had suggested a better policy, he said.

And he warned the house that "We are not going to deal effectively with the Sons of Freedom by giving them the spectacle of non-Doukhobors quarrelling with each other over the problem they present."

"Nothing could be more ridiculous," he declared. "Nothing could be more ridiculous."

Mr. Bonner, clean-up man for the government in the throne speech debate, gave much of his time and all his fire to the Sons of Freedom part of his speech.

He spoke for two hours and 20 minutes — five minutes longer than Mr. Harding — in the longest speech of this session.

He backhandedly complimented Mr. Harding for his "very clever effort to place the blame for any event that might arise in the entire Doukhobor community on the shoulders of this government."

"This proposition, he declared, 'defies logic and it defies reason. It won't stand the light of day.'"

Then he recited a year-long series of events and actions which he said proved that the government had "given a great deal of attention to the ramifications of the Sons of Freedom problem" and had produced "much concrete activity."

These included talks and correspondence with Ottawa aiming at joint effort by the two governments, talks which Mr. Bonner thought would bear fruit later on; protective measures "unprecedented in this province"; implementation of several recommendations of the consultative committee on Doukhobors, stressed as vital by Mr. Harding; and a program of proposed legislation which would "contribute to a long-term solution."

Throughout Mr. Bonner's address the House — government and opposition members alike — sat silently and attentively, in marked contrast to the hurly-burly of the afternoon sitting. Only one or two good-natured comments from the opposition broke the attorney-general's sober presentation.

Most of the opposition members sat woodenly in their seats. Mr. Harding scribbled notes. Tom Uphill (Lab-Fernie) leaned back, eyes closed, apparently sleeping.

Something Must Be Done Quickly, CCFer Warns

The provincial government must recognize the Sons of Freedom problem as a provincial responsibility, must be willing to spend any amount of money to solve it and must get to work on it—fast.

That was the gist of a dramatic two-and-a-quarter-hour speech by Randolph Harding, CCF member for Kaslo-Slocan, in the legislature Thursday.

The 39-year-old schoolteacher from the heart of the Freedomite territory gave the galleries the best show of the current session. Ranked by most MLAs as the best debater in the Opposition, he had six cabinet ministers parrying his incessant thrusts.

Mr. Harding blamed the cabinet for failing to produce a plan of action for settling the problem, for trying to saddle the federal government with the responsibility for the Freemodites and for letting the "almighty dollar" roadblock its efforts to date.

He warned the house that the Sons of Freedom problem is building to an explosive climax which is bound to end in bloodshed unless the government moves swiftly.

He painted a picture of a fear-ridden Slocan Valley where aged pensioners, man and wife, share long night watches to prevent their homes being burned around them, where "families are afraid to go out to a movie at night for fear they will find their homes in ashes when they return."

Railwaymen never know when they start out on a trip whether they'll ever see their families alive again, he said. Trainmen's wives "never know when they'll pick up the phone and hear the train has been blown into the Kootenay River."

"Trouble — danger — fear — from one day's end to another." That was the situation in what should be a "happy, peaceful, prosperous valley," now gripped by "fear such as you have never seen in this province."

CLIMAX COMING
"One of these days it's going to come to a climax," he said. "Someone is going to get killed. Then some very unfortunate incidents are going to take place. We must avoid that at all costs."

"Money should be no object," he went on. "The life of one man or one woman or one child is worth far more than all the cash we could spend."

Government members listened attentively to Mr. Harding for the first half-hour of his talk. Then the cabinet ministers began to heckle. Lands and Forests Minister Sommers, whose Rossland-Trail riding borders Mr. Harding's, led the counter-attack, while Attorney-General Bonner prepared his rebuttal for the evening sitting.

Premier Bennett first showed signs of losing his temper when Mr. Harding declared that "the full blame for the depredations in the southern boundary country rests fairly and squarely on the shoulders of this cabinet."

BENNETT OBJECTS
"That's not fair," Premier Bennett cried, rising to his feet. "Yes, it is," Mr. Harding said. "It's not fair," the premier repeated.

Mobs Start Rioting In Trieste Protest

BELGRADE (CP) — Angry mobs of Yugoslavs smashed windows at the British, United States and Italian embassies here Thursday night in violent protest against the Anglo-American decision to turn the city of Trieste over to Italian administration.

A spokesman for the Italian embassy said "many stones were thrown, many windows broken; it looks like an organized riot." A crowd of about 5,000 shouted "Tito give us guns—the fascists have raised their anous."

Officials of the British and U.S. embassies said windows were broken there. Crowds stationed a guard at the U.S. embassy but he escaped unhurt. Militiamen prevented the demonstrators from breaking into the Italian and British embassies.

Demonstrations which led to the violence broke out within half an hour after the Yugoslav people learned of the decision by Britain and the U.S. to withdraw their troops and turn over zone A of the territory of Trieste to Italy.

Yugoslavia declared it would refuse to accept the decision. Hundreds of Yugoslavs poured into the streets shouting "We will give up our lives but not Trieste."

The density of the crowds brought traffic to a standstill in many parts of the city. The crowds did not march in organized columns and the demonstration obviously was genuine popular reaction.

WINDOWS WRECKED
Demonstrators late Thursday night also wrecked the street floor display windows of both the U.S. information service headquarters and the British reading room. After smashing the plate glass, the mobs hauled away exhibits which they scattered in the streets.

No one was injured. Demonstrations also occurred in Zagreb, Skopje, Ljubljana and other towns where crowds swarmed before the British and American consulates.

The demonstrations began to die down late Thursday night, but Yugoslav radio stations continued to broadcast protest reports interspersed with patriotic music.

DECISION DENOUNCED
President Tito's government denounced the decision and vowed to fight it.

Britain and the United States announced that they are turning over to Italy zone A, including the port city of Trieste, which their troops have occupied since the free territory was established after the Second World War. The 4,000 American and 3,000 British soldiers now on duty there are to be withdrawn and replaced with Italian troops "as soon as practicable," it was announced.

The U.S. state department explained: "It is the firm belief of the two governments that this step will contribute to the stabilization of a situation which has disturbed Italy-Yugoslav relations in recent years."

Guiana Plans Protest Of Troops Landing

GEORGETOWN (Reuters) — state of emergency unless the situation changes, a reliable source said Thursday night.

Only antagonism aroused by the arrival of the troops has been from Jagan's party itself. It issued leaflets Thursday headlined "on guard" and calling on members for unwavering obedience to its orders.

A force of 120 infantry of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers was ferried in by plane from the British West Indies at noon, strengthening the detachment of fusiliers and marines put ashore from British warships early Thursday.

Britain announced two days ago that it was sending forces here to head off a threatened Communist-inspired uprising. It cited the sympathy of Prime Minister Jagan and his wife for Communist causes and claimed that trouble was brewing.

British officials here and aboard the warships in the harbor are unlikely to declare a state of emergency unless the situation changes, a reliable source said Thursday night.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower says Russia now has "the capability of atomic attack on us" and commands "a weapon or the forerunner of a weapon of power far in excess of the conventional types."

The president made the statement Thursday at his press conference in an effort to clarify seemingly conflicting statements by various officials on the potentialities of Soviet atom bomb and hydrogen bomb developments.

Eisenhower also announced that he has asked all members of his administration "to refrain from comment on Soviet nuclear capabilities unless they first check their statements with the chairman of the atomic energy commission."

Eisenhower also announced that he has accepted an invitation to Ottawa November 13-15 as the guest of the Canadian government.

Teenagers Get Vote Under Bill

Alternative Balloting To Be Discontinued

British Columbia's Social Credit government Thursday introduced legislation reducing the minimum age for voters from 21 years to 19 years.

At the same time the new Elections Act presented to the legislature would:

Throw out the alternative voting system used in the last two provincial general elections. Allow Doukhobors to vote.

Reduce by 30 days the time between the issuance of a writ of election and the polling day.

If the legislation is approved as expected, British Columbia will become the third province allowing 19-year-olds to vote.

Alberta, also under a Social Credit administration, has reduced the voting age to 19. In Saskatchewan, under a CCF administration, 18-year-olds are allowed to vote.

It is estimated that the change would extend the franchise to another 28,000 voters.

The alternative ballot, which allowed voters to make first, second, third, etc., choices of candidates, would be replaced with the single-choice ballot.

The alternative ballot was brought in by the coalition government of Premier Byron Johnson prior to 1952 provincial election which saw the Social Credit administration of Premier W. A. C. Bennett take office with a minority government. It was used again in the election last June 12 when Social Credit was returned with a working majority.

Extension of the franchise to Doukhobors is part of the government's general Doukhobor policy. The legislature already has given second reading approval in principle to another bill which will set up a one-man commission to investigate selling lands back to the Doukhobors. Another bill has been introduced that would legalize the Doukhobor "bread and salt" form of marriage.

The government believes it can save 30 days between the issuing of an election writ and the final count of ballots. At present it takes 60 days.

The government expects to save seven days between the day the election writ is issued and closing day of voters lists; seven days between closing day and nomination day; seven days between nomination day and polling day; and nine days between polling day and the final counting of absentee ballots.

Even as Hall's story came under close scrutiny, Attorney-General Herbert Brownell announced at Washington the couple would be turned over to the state for prosecution.

Charges of extortion have been filed by federal authorities. The state plans first degree murder and kidnapping charges. Both murder and kidnapping are punishable by death in Missouri.

Kidnappers Thought Lacking Accomplices

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation filed a fugitive warrant here Thursday night for the arrest of Thomas Marsh in the Bobby Greenleaf kidnapping but said it had held up any country-wide hunt for him.

In Washington, the official explanation was that Marsh was charged with murder of the six-year-old boy, but the FBI is not satisfied with the story of Carl Austin Hall who confessed he planned the kidnapping. Hall named Marsh as an accomplice and the one who shot the little brown-eyed son of multi-millionaire Robert C. Greenleaf.

Both state and federal authorities have said they doubt Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, 41, in whose St. Joseph, Mo., yard the boy's body was buried, had any accomplices.

The FBI said it had found the woman's fingerprints on a ransom extortion papers, showing that she had handled them.

Hall has insisted Mrs. Heady was duped into taking part in the abduction, contending she was unaware of it at the start.

Goose Seen Fighting Coyote

ROSEMARY, Alta. (CP) — The story of a valiant, desperate attempt by a Canada goose to drive off a slinking coyote from its badly injured mate was told here Thursday by a Montana hunter.

N. Shultz finished off the coyote and now is trying to nurse the bird back to health.

He also is applying for permission from federal game authorities to take the goose, which he believes will never fly again, back to Fort Benton "to live out the rest of its days in peace—a symbol of the unselfish devotion of the Canada goose for its mate."

Shultz came upon the wildlife drama while driving toward a duck feeding ground northwest of this south-central Alberta village. He found a big coyote repeatedly charging the goose, only to be beaten off each time by the violence of the bird's battering wings.

Mr. Shultz then saw the cause of the bitter battle. A female goose with a broken wing and other severe injuries was lying in the stubble. As he examined the wounded bird, its mate changed its protective tactics and flew in close several times in an effort to lure him away.

However, the hunter rewarded its loyalty to its mate by withholding his fire and brought the injured bird back to this village.

Long Strike To End When Jimmy's Bar Closes

DUN LAOGHAIRE (NANA) — The strike against Jimmy Downey's bar in Main Street here on March 6, 1939.

Despite efforts of union leaders to settle the dispute each year since then, Jimmy refused every overture down to the day of his death, and a picket still marches up and down outside the bar daily from opening to closing time.

"It was my husband's last wish that I should continue the fight against union intimidation," Mrs. Florence Downey told me. "He was 79 when he died and he did the work of two barmen and a doorman till the end. He lost most of his savings in the fight but it has cost the union more than us. It's been estimated the union has paid out more than $50,000 over it."

The quarrel with the union started when Downey fired a barman named Paddy Young. When the union's district leader came to inquire why, Jimmy's reply was: "Just because I did not like his face!"

Nettled by Jimmy's refusal to give a fuller explanation, the union pulled all his help out and set up a picket line. Jimmy replied by putting up posters inviting all and sundry to visit his bar to watch "the changing of the guard" every two hours.

The union pulled the brewers men into it. The drays stopped rolling up with the barrels.

Infuriated, Downey hooked up with friends in the trade who secretly sympathized with his fight for the right to hire and fire at will. They supplied him with beer on condition he pick up the barrels and roll them into his cellars himself.

Though this is normally the work of three men, Jimmy did it all by himself working with a handcart in the dead of night.

One night Jimmy found an intruder — lurking behind the counter trying to sabotage his stock. Jimmy beat the living daylight out of him. Then he kicked him out through the barroom door into the arms of a police patrol.

"Do what you like with him," he told the police. "I'm not pressing any charges."

There was a better feeling from then on between the men in the picket line and Jimmy. When the weather was unpleasant, he would invite the picket line in for a drink on the house. On the strike anniversary he gave a free drink to everyone who came in.

Paddy Young finally decided he did not want reinstatement and found himself a job elsewhere. But the union continued the strike on principle.

Eden Offers Assurance To Russia

MARGATE, Eng. (Reuters)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden held out the olive branch to Russia Thursday and said Britain's policy is to achieve an East-West settlement.

He encouraged reports that a Western offer of a non-aggression pact to Russia is in the making by adding:

"There is certainly room in our policy for assurances to the Soviet that we do not threaten their security. We are working on that to see in what form such assurances might be given."

Eden enunciated a two-point foreign policy for Britain.

To maintain the unity and the strength of the Western alliance and to keep the alliance defensive in character and indulgent in no provocation.

This policy, he said, provides for any meeting or conference with Russia which seemed practicable or profitable.

The convention later gave unanimous approval to a resolution that said that while any "sincere and firm approach" from Russia would be welcomed, it believed "the preservation of freedom depends on closer co-operation between the British Commonwealth, Europe and America."

Lord Salisbury, who acted as foreign secretary for Eden during his illness, answered the anxiety expressed by some convention delegates lest Britain "surrender" the Suez canal zone to Egypt.

"We have not yet reached agreement in our negotiations with the Egyptians even on general principles, and I am by no means certain that we shall," he said.

Rate Proposals Only Tentative

OTTAWA (UP)—Canada's new scale of equalized freight rates will be made as fair as possible to all regions and to the railways, Mr. Justice J. D. Kearney, chief commissioner of the board of transport commissioners, said Thursday.

The transport board head, who announced Monday new Harry Hives New Bishop Of Keewatin

WINNIPEG (CP)—Election of Archbishop Harry E. Hives of Battleford, Sask., as Anglican bishop of Keewatin was announced here Thursday after his wife had driven 30 miles over country roads to tell him the news.

Within three hours after Mrs. Hives had learned of the election, she had her husband back in Battleford from the Indian reservation where he had been visiting and he telephoned his acceptance of St. John's Cathedral in Winnipeg.

Awaiting the news here was the 32-member electoral committee of the Ecclesiastical Province of Rupert's Land, which then announced the election.

Archbishop Hives succeeds Bishop Joseph Lofthouse, who had resigned.

A graduate of Emmanuel College, Saskatoon, Archbishop Hives is commissary of Indian affairs for the diocese of Saskatoon.

Veteran Actor Dies

NIGEL BRUCE

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Nigel Bruce, 58, veteran actor of stage and screen who was best known for his portrayal of Dr. Watson opposite Basil Rathbone in the Sherlock Holmes movie series, died Thursday in St. John's Hospital.

He entered the hospital last Sunday night after a heart attack.

Born in Ensenada, Mexico, while his Scottish parents were on a world tour, Bruce was educated in England. After a brief fling at the brokerage business and service in France during the First World War as a private, he went to the stage.

He soon became established as a burlesque, sputtering comedian. After a series of successes he entered movies. Coming to Hollywood in 1934 he became a top character actor.

His widow and two daughters survive.

(One of them, Pauline, served with the RCAF (WPD) in Victoria during the war. The above picture was taken on one of the actor's visits with her here.)

Former Prisoners of Axis All Recommended for Pay

OTTAWA (CP)—Practically all Canadian service personnel and merchant seamen held prisoner by the Germans and Italians during the Second World War are expected to receive financial compensation for maltreatment.

Compensation will range from 20 cents a day to a maximum of $1 for each day of imprisonment and is expected to cost the treasury about $3,000,000 providing all the 9,000-odd former prisoners apply, an official of the war claims commission estimated.

The payment was recommended in a report submitted to the government Thursday by Chief Justice Thane A. Campbell of Prince Edward Island, chief war claims commissioner. A high government official said the recommendations would be implemented.

The commissioner, however, rejected a demand by the National Council of Canadian Prisoners of War for a flat $1 a day for European prisoners.

He said he had found that European prisoners had not suffered to the same extent as the men held by the Japanese or "criminal organizations." These prisoners are to be paid at the $1.00-a-day rate.

The chief justice decided, however, that for the purpose of granting awards all prisoners had suffered maltreatment of varying degrees. And he recommended that all prisoners be relieved from proving they had suffered an incapacity during internment.

At the same time, the chief justice provided that the commission should be in a position to refuse an award to a man who suffered no maltreatment.

Nationalists Claim Capture of Junks

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—Seaborne Chinese Nationalist guerrillas have captured nine Communist junks, the official central news agency reported Thursday. The agency said the junks were carrying supplies from Fukien province north to Shanghai.

Durkin Replaced

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower Thursday named assistant army secretary James P. Mitchell to replace Martin P. Durkin as secretary of labor.

Mitchell, the army's manpower chief, immediately promised "to do the best possible job for the people in the United States." He refused comment, however, on the Taft-Hartley law dispute that prompted Durkin's resignation.

The surprise appointment drew mixed reactions from union leaders.

Production Taxes

TAXES on production have always been enticing to public treasuries in need in additional cash, but they have also been among the most illusory of all forms of impost. The fact is that industrial production has a world index and is not the product of domestic policies, while it can be influenced by them fast enough. New mining and logging taxes in British Columbia when imposed will have to be considered in conjunction with existing heavy federal taxation on profits, and changing markets for this, an export province. Federal corporation and income taxes are already high, and further provincial levies are certainly not going to be met with cheers by industry.

In the long run that scale of taxation is best which permits the machinery of trade and commerce to continue to function freely. British Columbia has much to sell to the outside world both in the manufactured and unmanufactured state. If currency, marketing and other current problems are to be grappled with successfully, industry in this province will have to be treated sympathetically and with fairly clear understanding of the role that exports play in our economy. There is nowhere a law which states that the world must take our goods. It will only do so if British Columbia industries can compete on the basis of price, quality and continuity of supply. Every newly added tax can only operate as a brake on exports until such imposts can be absorbed. On a "down" elevator, that might take time.

Whatever fluctuations there may be ahead in world trade, British Columbia probably has more effective productive capacity now than at any comparable period in the past. Export industries are geared to supply their products in increasing volume. Only by using that capacity to the fullest extent possible in competition with others can British Columbia develop further, or even maintain the highly integrated industrial economy which has been built up slowly and steadily in the past. A sudden brake through taxation or any other cause at this time might be decidedly unfortunate, particularly as our prosperity is closely geared to the export of surpluses on a steady and sustained basis permitting high level employment.

'We Talk Too Much'

FROM Ottawa this week came a note that defense authorities were perturbed about certain "leaks" in military information, one of them relating to the "McGill Fence," an offshoot of radar developed in Canada and designed as part of the northern defensive screen contemplated by the United States and this country against possible attack from the north. One wonders sometimes if leaks are not of their own making, or at least of political making. Government authorities are so fond of grandiose statements, of smooth alluring assurances, that often they let their tongues run away with them.

One prominent figure in the Canadian-American defense liaison has in effect just admitted this, no less a person than the U.S. secretary of defense, Mr. Charles Wilson. "We are in trouble with our early warning system," he said of the radar network of which the "McGill Fence" is expected to form part, "chiefly because we talk too much." Talkativeness is a conspicuous feature of all government activity across the line, to a degree that in connection with national defense is sometimes astounding, but perhaps something of the kind might also be said of our own public officials. Leaks, at any rate, can frequently enough be laid at the door of imprudent utterances by public men.

Mr. Wilson's remark also had reference to certain strains that develop between nations co-operating with one another. For example he conceded that Americans "tend to treat Canada as though we could walk in and do as we like there. And this is most disturbing right now to Canadians." Well it might be. Co-operation does not mean dominance by the larger of the two partners in the defense of North America, and there is still the wartime memory of the U.S. telephone operator in Edmonton who answered a call to U.S. headquarters there with the words: "American army of occupation speaking." Discretion in more than one respect would seem to badly needed in the defensive alliance of this continent.

A Prod for Slowpokes

THE British Columbia government's proposed amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act aimed at "slowpoke" drivers who obstruct the highways unreasonably recognizes a problem which has been bothering traffic authorities everywhere for a long time. It is generally conceded that in certain circumstances the small-space driver can be almost as big a danger as the speed demon, and is the indirect cause of many serious accidents. By impeding the flow of traffic on roads built for express travel he provokes those behind him into taking dangerous chances.

The government's bill does not introduce a precedent. Other provinces have tried to cope with the problem of the slow driver by means of legislation, and the B.C. government's amendment is worded much the same as a law which has been in effect in Nova Scotia for some years. It is framed in very broad terms which leave almost everything to the discretion and individual opinions of those who would be responsible for enforcement. How effective it will be thus depends on how it is interpreted by the police and the magistrates.

While something needed to be done to prevent inconsiderate "Sunday drivers" from blocking main highways, it would be over-optimistic to assume that the problem can be solved merely by legislation, or that the new section in the act will be easy to apply. Those who crawl along at 20 miles an hour on a highway designed for 50 deserve legal prodding, but there is another side of the problem. If on any particular stretch of road the legal 50 mph is the "normal" speed of the traffic stream mentioned in the bill, is someone to be prosecuted for driving at 40? Not every motorist feels happy driving at 50 mph; yet at a lesser speed on B.C. highways, few of which are wide enough to provide passing lanes, a driver might be technically guilty of impeding traffic.

Since so much depends on all the circumstances of each case, the proposed new law probably could not have been made any more definitive, but it will need wise interpretation if it is to work fairly. Its best feature is that it gives police officers legal authority to break up traffic congestion caused by obstructionists who drive at unnecessarily slow speeds.

LIQUOR CONTROL LAWS

Sir,—To anyone brought up in England, accustomed to a barrel of beer in the larder, and a bottle of whisky in the sideboard cupboard, the liquor laws of Canada seem inexplicable.

I still wonder after living in lovely British Columbia 23 years that such totally un-British laws should have been accepted.

Perhaps I'd better tell you that though 10 in family, save for my father's glass of beer and whisky for his friends, it was seldom touched. Milk with all the cream (and what cream) was our portion.

NORMAN HARRISON,

Deep Cove, B.C.

IMPORTED WINES

Sir,—I agree with Mr. Nelles' letter re liquor control, except his reference to California wines. Canada buys far more from the U.S. than the U.S. buys from us, and some of the high protectionists there have already placed embargoes on Canadian imports and are trying to shut out still more Canadian imports. We are getting Australian and South African wines which are just as good as anything California produces, and both Australia and South Africa buy far more from Canada than we do from them.

I believe that wines from Australia and South Africa can be bought just as cheaply, if not cheaper than California wines. A good motto is "You trade with me and I will trade with you."

H. WHEELER,

1605 Richmond Road, Victoria, B.C.

LIQUOR CONTROL

Sir,—Noting the excellent letter of Charles M. Nelles in the Colonist, may I, too, as one of the great silent majority (born in Ireland, I can't always be "silent") applaud the good sense of the new liquor bill brought in by our present British Columbia government. I lived for a time in California during the days of prohibition in U.S.A. In the course of a long life, in many lands, I can truthfully say I never before or since, saw and heard of such drunkenness as was then prevalent; mainly the result of the Volstead Act prohibiting decent use of all liquor, an act which the U.S.A. was forced eventually to repeal.

The importing of good California wines to B.C. also would be a most excellent permit for our government to bestow on us, in the interest of true temperance.

(Mrs.) S. C. BEESON.

Duncan, B.C.

"Telling me they will have bigger bangs than this in Australia next week is of small consolation, O wise one."

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sailing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

BREATHES there a man with soul so dead he never embelished an anecdote. I rather doubt it.

You have listened, of course, to your best friend tell his favorite yarn, and you know that if he tells it twice in your hearing the second version slants upwards from the first. And if there is a third recital the tale grows taller than ever.

That is the way with history too. A university professor, whose job is teaching history, has been citing the dilemma that faces the historian. Says he:

"When I recall how much more easy it is for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for the most excellently trained historian to repeat a piece of gossip or an anecdote at the dinner-table without adding a little varnish . . . I have wondered sometimes how such a thing as ancient history could be taken seriously at all."

So, humbly, have I.

I have even been afflicted with the notion, sometimes, that history might be fairly well written by people who are living it rather than by somebody 100 years later who just browses through newspapers and old documents.

Purely on the assumption, of course, that people know a little bit about what is going on around them. Ah, you say, but look at the bias people exhibit in the middle of a hot controversy. A neat point. But ah, look at the bias of historians, political and personal.

Suppose, for example, an austere academician, 70 years hence, writing a treatise on ice arenas. He is a bloodless sort of chap who never learned to skate and so disdains the art. Would you be surprised if he condemned skaters as oafs who wore queer pieces of steel on their feet. Certainly he would scarcely be in sympathy with them.

You get the point, I trust. This crosses the orthodox view, which projects the thesis that the years uncover facts hidden to those making history. They do, I daresay, but still, listen again—to the professor.

"I must confess that, as a modern historian . . . when I think that the future student of the 1930's and 1940's is going to have to pick his way even among faked diaries and narratives of pretended witnesses . . ."

The professor then throws up his hands.

It is a difficult proposition, the writing of history, and the more you think about it the more sceptical you might easily become. Yet what is to be done.

***

Listen in at half-a-dozen witnesses giving evidence on, say, a traffic accident. Note how honest versions differ to the point of incredulity, and then decide the true history of the case. A judge is not to be envied.

Even the people making history do not always see straight.

The historian, says the professor, does not have direct access to the minds of the people he deals with; he has to use his own imagination to reconstruct an historical character.

Yes, he does, and that puts quite an onus on his imagination. And if he is a person who shies away from speaking too much ill of the dead, or is equally loath to give praise, the picture may be etched none too clearly.

What, then, does all this prove? Little else, I fear, than to suggest that when your friend garnishes his yarn for the fourth time in your presence, you take it as it comes and enjoy it.

Otherwise none of us will believe anything, and that is not good.

International Commentary . . .

Significance of Soviet Polemics

By W. N. EWER, From London

THE long and usually polemical arguments which precede actual proposals in Soviet diplomacy are often of more significance than the proposals themselves. This fact I think enables one to unravel the meaning of the much-studied Soviet note of September 28 to the three Western Powers. The proposals themselves are simply a repetition of those made in the note of August 4. There should be a conference to "examine measures for reducing tension in international relations"; another to "discuss the German question." Whether they would meet in sequence or simultaneously is not entirely clear.

If that were all there would seem to be no reason why such a suggestion should not be favorably considered by the three western governments. But the insistence that the Chinese Communists' government shall take part in the wider discussions makes it impossible that the proposal should be accepted at the present time.

That, of course, the Soviet government knows quite well. It may be that this is its purpose; that Moscow has in fact no desire for a conference, and is deliberately laying down a condition which it is sure will be rejected in order to be able to accuse the Western Powers of preventing, by their attitude towards the Chinese People's Republic, any serious attempt to ease the tension in international relations.

That the argument that "the constant participation of the People's Republic of China is necessary in . . . achieving a general reduction of tension in international relations" is one of expediency and not of principle is obvious. For in 1951 the Soviet government was at any rate in appearance perfectly willing that this should be dealt with by a four-power conference. But as I have said—the significance of the new note seems to me to lie now in the proposal for two conferences or in the insistence that Communist China should take part in one of them.

It is to be found in the lengthy introductory passages. For these disclose the character of the conferences which the Soviet government has in mind and give a sort of preview of the attitude which the Soviet delegation might be expected to adopt. They are in effect a statement of the subjects which the Soviet government would wish to have examined on the ground that they constitute the chief causes of international tension. And that statement is so drafted as to imply that the "examination" would take the form of a Soviet indictment of the policy of the Western Powers.

The British, French and American governments are, for example, asked to agree to discuss "the dangers of the aggressive policy of the North Atlantic bloc" and "acts of diversion, sabotage and terrorism in the countries of the democratic camp." The government of the United States is to discuss its "impermissible, crass and one-sided" attitude with regard to the Korean conference. It is "not to be denied" that the existence of British and American bases in Europe (an essential part of the West European defense system) "pursues aggressive ends." And so on. It is a reversion in harsher tones to the impossible agenda on which Mr. Gromyko insisted at the deputies meeting in Paris in 1951—and by that insistence made the holding of a four-power conference impossible.

So, too, with regard to Germany. The core of the Soviet proposal is that the first step must be the formation of a provisional all-German government by the co-operation of the two existing governments. Unless that is accepted "practicable measures towards the re-establishment of Germany's unity are precluded." Again it is an impossible proposal. For not only the West German government but the Social Democrat opposition is emphatic that especially since the June revolt in Eastern Germany any such partnership with the East German Communists is excluded.

What then does all this signify? The Soviet government proposes two conferences. But in each case it is careful to lay down preliminary conditions which it knows to be impossible ones. I am driven to what seems to me the inescapable conclusion that, in existing circumstances, the Soviet government would find a conference on German problems more than embarrassing. But it cannot admit that. Therefore, instead of refusing the three-power invitation it ignores it. But it effectively makes its holding impossible.

And it does so in a manner which it hopes will enable it to pretend that it is the Western Powers which are refusing to confer.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

IN A little biographical sketch of one of our outstanding public figures yesterday was the fact that he and his wife close their day by reading aloud to each other. Sometimes it is a detective thriller. Or it might be one of the good books of the year, noticed by all the reviewers. Occasionally, it said, they read the newspaper aloud.

A more horrible picture of communal bias would be hard to conjure up. Imagine the two of them, middle-aged, propped up in bed, spectacles down their noses, eloquently reading aloud. How long do they read? Half an hour? An hour? Does the reader start to snore? Is that the signal for lights out? Or does the party of the first part go right on droning to the end of the chapter? It is thoughts like this that disturb my own rest. I bet tonight I won't be able to get to sleep for the thought of Darbies and Joans all over creation reading aloud to each other at the end of the long, long day. Do they take turns? Does the husband read five pages and then hand the book to the wife? How do they decide who starts first? Do they toss up?

I can just picture the absurd creatures, hastily undressing and pulling on their night shirts, (a man like that would certainly wear a flannellette night shirt), so as to clamber eagerly into bed, get their spectacles adjusted and grab for the book or the paper or the magazine . . .

As a matter of fact, now that I come to think of it, all this anger on my part is inspired largely by the fact that I hate reading aloud on anybody's part, anywhere, any time. I have a relative who brings all the letters she gets from her nephews, nieces, and even friends who are on a motor trip, and sits in my living room, and in a loud, ringing voice, with all suitable elocutionary effects, including gestures, eyebrows, punctuation marks and exclamation points, reads the blame things from page one to eight. Another of my burdens is a male who seizes the paper the minute it arrives and reads aloud all the exciting items, the weather, the jokes on the editorial page, with suitable comments upon each. By the time I get hold of the paper, it is second-hand. It's used.

Reading aloud should be confined to the pulpit, the mortuary parlor and the court of law.

Riding with Russell

Deflated Tires Improve Ride

BY FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

Since extra weight, other things being equal, makes a car ride more easily there are many owners who jump to the conclusion that putting several hundreds of pounds of sandbags or window sashweights in the luggage compartment will turn the "puddle jumper" into the soft luxury of a $5,000 job. It seldom occurs to these folk that they could get the same results by reducing tire pressures. In either case tire life is sacrificed, but where the pressure route is followed at least the engine doesn't have all that extra weight to carry. Nor do the brakes have extra work to do.

Added weight does help to flatten out over-arched leaf springs, but since most cars today have quite flat rear springs the extra weight is not especially desirable. There is a certain sense of added solidity with the increased weight, but it is partially psychological. In slippery weather it may help traction.

TEST FOR GUIDE WEAR

Testing for valve guide wear is done with the aid of a vacuum gauge, but the exact amount of wear can only be determined by measurement. A rough guess at wear can be made by removing an old valve and inserting a new one. Sometimes it is the valve stem that wears, not the guide. Under such conditions a new valve will fit snugly.

HOW DRY IT WAS

How the weather can affect a car's operation was certainly hammered home to me in great shape this past year. Prior to summer I had been using Kathryn's car for errands and leaving my car in the garage, which, being part of lower level of the house, is generously heated.

Later when I began using my car more extensively I was alarmed because of a very unusual groaning action whenever starting off. Since this car is Hotchkiss drive (meaning that the push of the wheels is conveyed to the chassis and body through the rear leaf springs) I immediately suspected spring or shackle trouble. A thorough inspection, however, showed nothing on this order. Every trick was tried. But invariably the groaning came back.

Then came summer with a lot of outdoor parking at the sea-side. Suddenly I became conscious of the fact that the groaning had completely disappeared. It has not returned. You have probably guessed that

Victoria Garageman Provides Interesting Facts

History of Ancient Cars Deeper Than Believed

The automobile plays a big part in the life of Victoria's Phil Foster.

It has not only provided the well-known garageman with the means of livelihood but also has furnished him with two interesting hobbies.

Mr. Foster is noted in Victoria for his fine collection of antique cars, but he has another passion which is not as well known.

recording the histories of old buggies.

"I believe the most interesting part of the antique car hobby to most would be the growing pains these old cars went through," he says.

INTERESTING NOTES

Here are just a few of the interesting notes he has collected.

Although most persons today can only recollect the horseless carriage as a relatively modern contraption, actually the first self-propelled vehicles in United States alone began 145 years ago.

The original world pioneer was Cugnot of France who built his cumbersome steam tractor in 1769. Ten steam coaches, forerunners of the motor bus, operated profitably in England from 1828 to 1838.

NUMEROUS MAKES

How many people can name another steam driven vehicle other than the Stanley Steamer? According to Mr. Foster there were as many as 125 makes of steamers and more than 100 electrically-run autos.

Charles Duryea built one of the first gas buggies in 1893, and three years later this car was exhibited at the Barnum and Bailey Circus along with the bearded lady and other freaks.

CARRIAGE WHEELS

Some early cars were made to look as much like a horse drawn vehicle as possible. They were equipped with carriage wheels, springs and dash with may hear no waiting period is necessary.

Q—Apparently the valve guides on my car's engine are a little on the tight side because there is some difficulty preventing the valves from sticking. Would you recommend having the guides reamed out a little larger? J. V. N.

A—No. Try to get along with valve oils and additives until the guides wear normally. This engine probably will turn out to be a very satisfactory one from the standpoint of valve action.

Q—There is an annoying, and somewhat alarming "clunking" noise somewhere in the steering system of my car. I seem to get it most when cutting the wheel to their extremes as in parking, but occasionally hear it when driving over rough roads. W. M. C.

A—From what you say I suspect that one of the shock absorbers is causing this. One of the front shocks may be shy of fluid or defective.

whip socket and sometimes, Ford was one of the first to buck the patent and advertised thereby making the use of a motor heat indicator unnecessary.

A Battle Creek genius designed a horseless carriage body with a life-sized horse's head in front to reassure its brothers on the road. But it delivered no steel because the sounds emanating from beneath the vehicle in no way resembled the most thoroughgoing abdominal rumblings of a hay burner.

When the first auto reached the public the laws of the country were certainly not in favor of these "new-fangled" contraptions.

Three road regulations set up in Pennsylvania are typical of what these early car jockeys had to put up with.

These rules were: One—Autos traveling on country roads at night must send up a rocket every mile, then wait 10 minutes for the road to clear. The driver may then proceed with caution.

Two—If driver sees a team of horses approaching he is to stop, pull over to the side of the road and cover his machine with a dust cover which is painted or colored to blend with the scenery.

Three—In case a horse is not willing to pass a car on the road, the driver of the car must take the machine apart as readily as possible and conceal the parts in the bushes.

Instead council wants further negotiations with the firm and details on the size and style of advertising, City Solicitor Arthur Patton has also been asked to give a legal opinion on the matter.

REVENUE LOST

Ald. Waldo Skillings said it would be "ill-advised" to turn down the request. He said by doing the job itself the city would be losing revenue and adding cost.

"The committee was swayed by the opinion of the city engineer," he said. City Engineer Cyril Jones has stated benches with advertising would be undignified in Victoria, a residential city.

advertising firm wouldn't be interested and couldn't make money unless "the benches were plastered with advertising signs."

Plea Made On Zoning

City council will ask the Town Planning Commission to consider a zoning application previously refused A. J. Helmcken, owner of a Moss Street lot.

Mr. Helmcken appeared before city council Thursday. He wanted the lot changed from single family to apartment.

MANY APARTMENTS

The whole area, he said, is surrounded by apartment houses which will be there for many years despite the zoning by-law intent to make it single family.

"Whether we like it or not, this area is used for apartments, not for single family dwellings," he said.

They Know—They Bought One

What's an Autoclave? Just Ask City Council

Anybody know what an autoclave is? Don't be ashamed to say no. City council doesn't know what it is either and they bought one for $275. In fact they got a larger autoclave than the one they didn't know they had.

A recommendation from the Union Board of Health at Victoria's health department that a sterilizer be purchased for the sum of approximately $275.

PASSED WITHOUT WORD

The committee resolution passed without a word. Queried later each alderman admitted he didn't know what it was and that maybe one of the others did.

Wonder if an autoclave is a conclave of car owners? Or could it be one of those thing-a-ma-jigs they use to test your watch-a-ma-callit in the city's health department? It's a sterilizer.

The TACKLE BOX

BY JIM TANG

Biologist Charlie Guiguet has taken a lot of ribbing and been treated with a certain amount of skepticism ever since he undertook to tell members of a city service club how he catches coho salmon. Scoffing friends and acquaintances made much of his insistence that the best lure was a green and white buck-tail fly—a striped one. Well, don't scoff any more folks, the guy has something.

Not exactly doubtful because I knew before that Charlie was among the more successful anglers but wanting to see it first hand just the same, I went fishing with him Sunday morning.

Our original plan had been to try our luck at Deep Cove and Arbutus Island and we were on our way when my "guide" suggested we try it for a few minutes off Sananus Island. We got no further. Within two hours we had boated seven of the finest-looking coho I have seen, averaging about eight or nine pounds, had lost five or six others, and not interested in them that day, had put back about 20 large-sized grise.

We did it Charlie's way, using his flies and fishing them from 15 to 40 feet behind the boat with a spinner but no weight. It was very convincing.

The flies, I'm certain, are the big thing, for most experienced coho anglers fish with a short line. But not many have the Guiguet fly. Charlie ties them himself these days although the first he used were tied by Dave Grey. They are short and clipped but fairly thick with a thick layer of tinsel around the front hook and a gold hook at the rear. And I believe, most important of all, they are a bottle green in color. Most green flies are a lighter green and not nearly as successful as the darker shade used by the fishing biologist. Claude Creed and Stan Williams will probably subscribe to that theory, too, having wangled a few flies and scored with them. The two I managed to get by looking envious are not for sale, either.

But it's not just throwing out a fly and pulling in fish. Charlie fishes hard, changing boat speed until he has it right and keeping his eyes on two rods. He has amazing eyesight and continually pointed out salmon as they swam along behind the lures for a look. If they aren't taking, he will change flies and/or speed and if he doesn't see any salmon, he'll move to another spot. And, making him unusual indeed, he doesn't seem too interested in making sure of his fish after a strike.

"The strike's the thing," he explained. "Besides, if we land them all we'll have our limit too soon."

So help me, it's true.

And tomorrow is the start of the annual three-day coho derby at Cowichan Bay sponsored by the Cowichan Bay Salmon Club. This event is becoming increasingly popular each year and, as usual, it will attract scores of Victorians who have made this an annual "must."

Rules are simple. There are three separate daily derbies—Saturday, Sunday and Monday, which is Thanksgiving Day in case you've forgotten. No membership is needed but each day requires a separate entry so don't make any mistake and believe that one ticket will entitle you to fish each of the three days. It's a red ticket for Saturday, a white one for Sunday and a blue one for Monday.

Tickets are available at Victoria sporting goods stores and at Cowichan Bay boathouses at one dollar for each day. One half the net proceeds will go to the Queen Alexandra Solumium, which has already received about $1,500 from this event.

First prize each day is $100 and there are 15 merchandise prizes daily as well. Largest fish caught during the derby will entitle the lucky angler to the Anchor Cafe Trophy while all ticket purchasers will have a chance to win the $400 consolation prize—the choice of a television set, deep freezer or fur coat.

Derby rules are simple. Only artificial lures are permissible and the use of herring dodgers (flashers) is banned. Fishing period each day is from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the fishing area is from the river mouth to a straight line drawn between Cherry Point and Cape Keppell on Salt Spring Island and through to Bold Bluff in Sanson Narrows.

Reports on fishing are skimpy but Cowichan Bay is said to be improved after last week's lack of action. Only a few boats have been out at the Goldstream end of Saanich Inlet but those that have had good luck with R. W. Wray boating a 16½-pound coho yesterday evening using a No. 3 Tom Mack spoon with two ounces of weight. In the Brentwood area, fishing has been good only in the early mornings with coho going for the bucktail fly in the area around Senanus Island. Deep Cove reported a large school of grise in last night and scattered action on coho.

Rocks Get Belated City Nod

The Shamrocks have finally received a pat on the back from City Council.

A motion was introduced by Ald. Frank Mulliner at Thursday's meeting expressing the city's appreciation of the lacrosse team's success in the Inter-city playoffs and of their efforts in the Mann Cup finals.

A letter embodying the motion will be sent to Red McMillan, team coach.

"A little late," said Ald. Waino Skillings and Ald. Arthur Dowell together.

Golf--- Here's How

BY SAM SNEAD

Here's a player making a shot in good golf form. Notice that his weight is forward so that he was able to swing down strongly, smoothly, accurately. Our picture doesn't show us too clearly, but the player's left shoulder is rising rather perpendicularly. This permits his right shoulder to pass under his chin in the follow through while he keeps his eyes fixed on where the ball was, and his head immovable both in the horizontal and vertical planes. Just after impact, as pictured, notice that his hips and shoulders are both almost parallel with the line of flight. But the left hip has correctly pivoted back away from the line a trifle, taking the body out of the way for a full, smooth, follow through. This player is a good golfer. His feet are well anchored to the ground. He is in no danger of losing his balance, and thus spilling his shot, as he pours clubhead power into the ball. (Retected 1951, by John F. Dille Co.)

'Grey Ghosts' To Be Seen In Dog Shows

A large entry has been received for the Victoria City Kennel Club's championship dog shows and obedience trials to be held in the lower ballroom of the Crystal Garden today and Saturday.

Among the many entries are five Weimaraners from a well-known Washington State kennel. These dogs are used for tracking as well as hunters and are often dubbed the Grey Ghosts.

Also entered is a Rhodesian Ridgeback, a dog used for lion hunting. Judging will start each day at 10 a.m. and will continue until 10 p.m. Wally Bowden of Victoria will judge all breeds in the opening show and Victor Williams of Vancouver will judge Saturday's show.

Stan Hack was rehired Wednesday for his fourth consecutive term as manager of Los Angeles Angels of the Pacific Coast Baseball League.

Finnish Girl To Race at Speedway Monday

A 22-year-old Finnish girl, who would rather race cars and tinker with engines than keep house and who was the only woman regular in the Finnish army during the Second World War, will appear at Shearing's Speedway Monday as a guest driver.

She is Kajia Kalevala, the only woman race car driver in the Pacific Northwest, who has just completed her second season of driving at Vancouver's Digney Speedway.

HAS OWN CAR

The pert, blond driver, who arrived in Vancouver in May of 1952 from Europe with only two dollars in her pocket, will be supplied with a big car and stock car by officials of the Cobble Hill quarter-mile track. She may bring her Ford coupe stocker, which she describes as having "seven cylinders—the eighth one will not go."

Kajia has 21 silver trophies which she won in her native Finland against all male competition in both stock and sports cars division and is setting her sights on the big tracks in California and eventually Indianapolis, the top track in the country.

When she arrived in Vancouver, she got a job with a motor firm as a mechanic and saved enough money to buy an old car, which she fixed up herself and took out to Digney's. Kajia won her first trophy in Finland in 1942 and once had a sports car up to 130 miles an hour.

STUNT DRIVER

She has worked as a stunt girl for a Finnish movie company, piling a car into other cars and trucks and rolling the machine over on an embankment.

Kajia's only spill in racing came against male drivers in several trophy races at Digney's special events and may be all driver. Time trial starts at last May when her car rolled over, but she came out of the smash uninjured.

When Kajia was 15, Russia attacked her native country and she joined up, driving a munitions truck at the front lines. Once a Russian plane strafed the truck she was driving but she escaped unharmed by crawling under the engine.

The amazing Finnish girl will arrive here Monday and will tune up at the track Monday morning. She will compete championships as a guest driver.

The Thanksgiving Day card will feature provincial championships in both big car and stock car divisions with two time trials in each section and one main event of either 30 or 40 laps.

During the final program of the season, all trophies won during the year will be presented to the drivers and Ken Nelson will receive the Shearing's trophy as the most popular driver.

Lumbermen Doubt Value of Tax Plan

BY HARRY YOUNG

Colonist Business Editor

Among lumbermen and forestry experts, there exists considerable doubt as to whether the government's proposal to tax logging operations is the best contribution to the welfare of the province.

He pointed out that with pulp and paper mills taking what was previously waste lumber, the amount of slash left on the forest floor could be greatly reduced.

The government operators more to clean up this mess than to make a contribution to the province's revenue.

Jury Told Death Car Was Going 100 MPH

The car that carried two Vancouver salesmen to their deaths near Courtenay on September 30 was going at 100 miles an hour when it plunged off the road, a coroner's jury was told at Courtenay Wednesday.

The jury brought in a verdict of accidental death of Arthur R. Brown and Walter E. Haley, both salesmen for the Bowen Fraser Company, Ltd., Vancouver.

Both men were killed instantly in the crash. The car traveled about 400 feet past the first skid mark on the road, near Miracle Beach, struck and snapped off a power pole and carried a 500-pound rock about 80 feet before coming to rest, RCMP officers told the jury.

Two RCMP officers told the jury that the car was identified as a Jaguar sports car.

Gift of Buck Deer Approved by Council

City council Thursday approved the parks committee gift of two Beacon Hill Park deer to the UBC zoology department for diet and growth experiments.

Chairman Ald. Waldo Skillings explained that the two young bucks actually belong to the B.C. Game Department and that the pens in the city's park are now overstocked.

Mayor Claude Harrison wanted the evening.

Three hundred Vancouver Island deepsea longshoremen have asked Ottawa for the services of a federal conciliation officer in a pay dispute with the Shipping Federation of B.C.

Also involved in the dispute along with the Alberni and Chemainus waterfront workers are 1,100 at Vancouver and 400 at New Westminster.

The workers are members of International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, which is affiliated with the CCL in Canada, but an independent organization in the U.S.

Union representative Bill Henderson said the conciliator was requested after the federation proposed a 25-cent hourly cut in wages and negotiations broke down.

Uncle Wiggily Story - -

By Howard Garis

FUNNY TRICKS

Looking out from the back of the covered wagon in which he was riding with the Dog Show, Uncle Wiggily could see Chief, Bosun and Pat Butter walking down the road back toward Woodland.

"I'm sorry I had to play a trick on my friends," said the rabbit uncle to himself. "But I didn't want them to find me. I want to do some acts on the stage. I want to do funny tricks and make the audience laugh. After that I will hop back to my bungalow and tell everybody all about it."

Mr. Longears—could hear Bosun say: "Shiver my marlin spike! Chief! Where do you reckon Cap'n Wiggily is? He just disappeared!"

"Well, Bosun, you made him disappear in that funny-trick of yours," barked Chief. "Now our rabbit friend seems to have done a better vanishing act than you had him do."

"Avast and belay! You're right, Chief!" barked Bosun. "Have you any ideas, Mr. Pat Butter, sir?"

"The whole trouble," bleated the grocery store goat, "is that Wiggily didn't eat enough Swiss cheese. If he had nibbled some of the holes, this never would have happened."

Winning Contract

By Howard Schenken and Richard L. Frey

South waited about "bad break" in his deal, when in fact the bad break should have made it easy for him to make his contract.

West opened the spade Jack. Dummy won and led a diamond. East discarding a spade and South moaning as he took the ace; his grief stemmed from the fact that he could not avoid the loss of a trump trick. Nevertheless, he led another diamond and finessed the jack, cashed the diamond king and then led a heart to the king. East had been hard-pressed for discards on the three diamond leads but had decided to let go of three spades. Consequently, when declarer continued the hearts for three rounds and West ruffed with the high trump, East had South's remaining heart covered; and a club lead from West left declarer with no means of avoiding another loser.

South might better have taken advantage of the knowledge that he had to lose a trump trick regardless, and stopped playing diamonds as soon as he won the ace. A club to the ace and a club ruff, a diamond to the jack and another club ruff, then a heart to the king and a ruff of dummy's last club would have insured the contract. Dummy would get back with the spade ace to cash the diamond king. Then declarer would ruff hearts and though West ruffed the third round dummy would remain with a trump to win the twelfth trick.

Harding, Bonner Clash over Sect

Socreds Held Taking Every Sensible Step

The provincial government is taking "every step dictated by good common sense" to solve the Sons of Freedom problem, Attorney-General Robert Bonner declared Thursday night in the legislature.

There could be no overnight solution to the problem, he said, and in fact there was no guarantee that any program of action that could be launched by the province would have the slightest effect on the radical Freedomites.

The attorney-general, winding up the throne speech debate, rebuked CCF critic Randolph Harding who earlier in the day had blasted the government for lack of action on the Sons.

Mr. Bonner staunchly defended the Doukhobor policy of his government. It was doing everything it could to cope with the problem, and no one—including Mr. Harding—had suggested a better policy, he said.

And he warned the house that "We are not going to deal effectively with the Sons of Freedom by giving them the spectacle of non-Doukhobors quarrelling with each other over the problem they present."

"Nothing could be more ridiculous," he declared. "Nothing could be more ridiculous."

Mr. Bonner, clean-up man for the government in the throne speech debate, gave much of his time and all his fire to the Sons of Freedom part of his speech. He spoke for two hours and 20 minutes—five minutes longer than Mr. Harding—in the longest speech of this session.

He backhandedly complimented Mr. Harding for his "very clever effort to place the blame for any event that might arise in the entire Doukhobor community on the shoulders of this government."

"This proposition," he declared, "defies logic and it defies reason. It won't stand the light of day."

Then he recited a year-long series of events and actions which he said proved that the government had "given a great deal of attention to the ramifications of the Sons of Freedom problem" and had produced "much concrete activity."

These included talks and correspondence with Ottawa aiming at joint effort by the two governments, talks which Mr. Bonner thought would bear fruit later on; protective measures "unprecedented in this province"; implementation of several recommendations of the consultative committee on Doukhobors, stressed as vital by Mr. Harding; and a program of proposed legislation which would "contribute to a long-term solution."

Throughout Mr. Bonner's address the House—government and opposition members alike—sat silently and attentively, in marked contrast to the hurly-burly of the afternoon sitting. Only one or two good-natured comments from the opposition broke the attorney-general's sober presentation.

Most of the opposition members sat woodenly in their seats. Mr. Harding scribbled notes. Tom Uphill (Lab-Fernie) leaned back, eyes closed, apparently sleeping.

Something Must Be Done Quickly, CCFer Warns

The provincial government must recognize the Sons of Freedom problem as a provincial responsibility, must be willing to spend any amount of money to solve it and must get to work on it—fast.

That was the gist of a dramatic two-and-a-half-hour speech by Randolph Harding, CCF member for Kaslo-Slocan, in the legislature Thursday.

The 39-year-old schoolteacher from the heart of the Freedomite territory gave the galleries the best show of the current session. Ranked by most MLAs as the best debater in the Opposition, he had six cabinet ministers parrying his incessant thrusts.

Mr. Harding blamed the cabinet for failing to produce a plan of action for settling the problem, for trying to saddle the federal government with the responsibility for the Freedomites and for letting the "almighty dollar" roadblock his efforts to date.

He warned the house that the Sons of Freedom problem is building to an explosive climax which is bound to end in bloodshed unless the government moves swiftly.

He painted a picture of a fear-ridden Slocan Valley where aged pensioners, man and wife, share long night watches to prevent their homes being burned around them where "families are afraid to go out to a movie at night for fear they will find their homes in ashes when they return."

Railwaymen never know when they start out on a trip whether they'll ever see their families alive again, he said. "Trainmen's wives 'never know when they'll pick up the phone and hear the train has been blown into the Kootenay River.'"

"Trouble—danger—fear—from one day's end to another." That was the situation in what should be a "happy, peaceful, prosperous valley," now gripped by "fear such as you have never seen in this province."

CLIMAX COMING
"One of these days it's going to come to a climax," he said. "Someone is going to get killed. Then some very unfortunate incidents are going to take place. We must avoid that at all costs. Money should be no object."

He went on. "The life of one man or one woman or one child is worth far more than all the cash we could spend."

Government members listened attentively to Mr. Harding for the first half-hour of his talk. Then the cabinet ministers began to heckle. Lands and Forests Minister Sommers, whose Rosland-Trail riding borders Mr. Harding's, led the counter-attack, while Attorney-General Bonner prepared his rebuttal for the evening sitting.

Premier Bennett first showed signs of losing his temper when Mr. Harding declared that "the full blame for the depredations in the southern boundary country rests fairly and squarely on the shoulders of this cabinet."

RENETT OBJECTS
"That's not fair," Premier Bennett cried, rising to his feet. "Yes, it is," Mr. Harding said. "It's not fair," the premier repeated.

Winds Break Lines

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)

A raging wind and rain storm lashed northern and north-central B.C. Wednesday night and early Thursday, knocking out all telephone and telegraphic communications for more than 15 hours.

No serious damage was reported to city telephone lines, but officials said more than 60 homes and offices were without service Thursday morning.

THREE HITS LINES

Telegraphic and telephone communication was cut off when a tree fell across lines between Shames and Eastview during the night, Canadian National Telegraph officials here said.

Telegrams from Terrace were on the job early Thursday.

The Daily News teletype service also was knocked out and the flow of world news was cut off. Radio station CFRP was unable to bring listeners any network programs until 3 p.m.

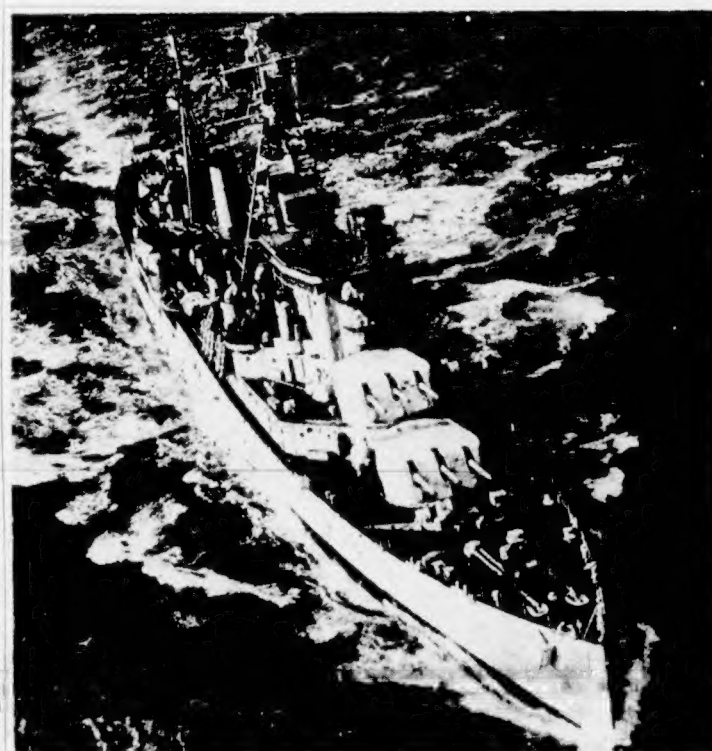

HIGH WINDS

Reports from the Queen Charlotte Islands also told of high winds and rain during the night. A recreational building at Sandspit was reported to have been blown down. No one was in the structure at the time.

The CNR train due here at 9:33 p.m. was running 12 hours late, due to a washout near McBride. Winds averaged 45 miles an hour with gusts up to 60 mph.

BILL INTRODUCED TO CUT VOTE AGE

Britain Sends Ships to Guiana

Britain's 8,000-ton cruiser, the Superb, has arrived at Georgetown, British Guiana, with 600 troops aboard to quell a possible Red insurrection. Governor of the colony, Sir Alfred Savage, has been given authority to oust the Moscow-trained leaders of the People's Progressive Party, newly elected to power and seeking self-

Guiana Planning To Protest Landing of British Troops

GEORGETOWN (Reuters)—Prime Minister Cheddi Jagan told the House of Assembly Thursday night his leftist cabinet has decided to send a delegation to London to protest against the landing of troops here.

He said the delegation might also go to New York to put the case of his government before the United Nations.

British troops Thursday night patrolled the streets in weapons carriers and took over guard duty at the governor's palace from local police.

Jet Race
Very Close

LONDON (Reuters)—Five jet bomber planes were neck and neck early today in the air race to New Zealand as they screamed down to refueling points and raced toward the half-way mark, Ceylon.

The bombers were in the speed section of the eight-plane race which began at dusk from London airport Thursday night.

Long Strike To End When Jimmy's Bar Closes

DUN LAOGHAIRE (NANA)—The strike against Jimmy Downey's bar in Dublin is ending this month.

An auctioneer's gavel will sound the bar's knell on October 30. This will be concluded what is probably the longest strike in all history. It began in 1939 when Jimmy fired a barman. His end follows by several months the conclusion of Jimmy himself. He died last spring, and his aging and weary widow has decided not to continue the long-drawn-out—if fairly pacific—battle.

It all began when the Irish National Union of Vintners, Grocers and Allied Trades Assistants pulled their men out of Downey's bar in Main Street here on March 6, 1939.

Despite efforts of union leaders to settle the dispute each year since then, Jimmy refused every overture down to the day of his death, and a picket still marches up and down outside the bar daily from opening to closing time.

"It was my husband's last wish that I should continue the fight against union intimidation," Mrs. Florence Downey told me. "He was 79 when he died and he did the work of two barmen and a doorman till the end. He lost most of his savings in the fight but it has

House Gets New Act

Alternative Voting To End, Campaign Time Being Cut

British Columbia's Social Credit government Thursday introduced legislation reducing the minimum age for voters from 21 years to 19 years.

At the same time the new Elections Act presented to the legislature would:

Throw out the alternative voting system used in the last two provincial general elections.

Allow Doukhobors to vote.

Reduce by 30 days the time between the issuance of a writ of election and the polling day.

If the legislation is approved as expected, British Columbia will become the third province allowing 19-year-olds to vote. Alberta, also under a Social Credit administration, has reduced the voting age to 19. In Saskatchewan, under a CCF administration, 18-year-olds are allowed to vote.

It is estimated that the change would extend the franchise to another 28,000 voters.

The alternative ballot, which allowed voters to make first, second, third, etc., choices of candidates, would be replaced with the single-choice ballot.

The alternative ballot was brought in by the coalition government of Premier Byron Johnson prior to 1952 provincial election which saw the Social Credit administration of Premier W. A. C. Bennett take office with a minority government.

It was used again in the election last June 12 when Social Credit was returned with a working majority.

Extension of the franchise to Doukhobors is part of the government's general Doukhobor policy. The legislature already has given second reading—approval in principle—to another bill which will set up a one-man commission to investigate selling lands back to the Doukhobors. Another bill has been introduced that would legalize the Doukhobor "bread and salt" form of marriage.

The government believes it can save 30 days between the issuing of an election writ and the final count of ballots. At present it takes 80 days.

The government expects to save seven days between the day the election writ is issued and closing day of voters lists; seven days between closing day and nomination day; seven days between nomination day and polling; and nine days between polling day and the final counting of absentee ballots.

Both state and federal authorities have said they doubt Hall and Mrs. Bonnie Brown Heady, 41, in whose St. Joseph, Mo., yard the boy's body was buried, had any accomplices.

The FBI said it had found the woman's fingerprints on ransom extortion papers, showing that she had handled them.

Hall has insisted Mrs. Heady was duped into taking part in the abduction, contending she was unaware of it at the start.

Even as Hall's story came under close scrutiny, Attorney-General Herbert Brownell announced at Washington the couple would be turned over to the state for prosecution.

Charges of extortion have been filed by federal authorities. The state plans first degree murder and kidnapping charges. Both murder and kidnapping are punishable by death in Missouri.

Killer Nabbed
At Theatre

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Ex-convict Harold Miller, a San Francisco policeman-killer whose flight to Los Angeles touched off an intense one-day manhunt here, was captured Thursday night by detectives who spotted him in a downtown movie theatre.

The baby-faced gunman was found asleep in the upper balcony of the theatre by detectives who, fearful of gunplay in the crowded movie house, waited until Miller woke and then followed him outside.

As soon as he reached the street, Miller was grabbed by the trailing officers and disarmed of a German Luger pistol, the same one with which he admittedly killed San Francisco Police Inspector Dennis Bradley in a gun battle Wednesday night.

The youthful slayer, who forced two Korean veterans to drive him here from the Bay City, offered no resistance to his captors.

Mobs Start Rioting In Trieste Protest

BELGRADE (CP)—Angry mobs of Yugoslavs smashed windows at the British, United States and Italian embassies here Thursday night in violent protest against the Anglo-American decision to turn the city of Trieste over to Italian administration.

A spokesman for the Italian embassy said "many stones were thrown, many windows broken; it looks like an organized riot." A crowd of about 5,000 shouted "Tito give us guns—the fascists have raised their snouts."

Officials of the British and U.S. embassies said windows were broken there. Crowds stoned a guard at the U.S. embassy but he escaped unhurt.

Milliamen prevented the demonstrators from breaking into the Italian and British embassies.

Demonstrations which led to the violence broke out within half an hour after the Yugoslav people learned of the decision by Britain and the U.S. to withdraw their troops and turn over zone A of the territory of Trieste to Italy.

Yugoslavia declared it would refuse to accept the decision. Hundreds of Yugoslavs poured into the streets shouting "We will give up our lives but not Trieste."

The density of the crowds brought traffic to a standstill in many parts of the city. The crowds did not march in organized columns and the demonstration obviously was genuine popular reaction.

Demonstrations also occurred in Zagreb, Skopje, Ljubljana and other towns where crowds swarmed before the British and American consulates.

The demonstrations began to die down late Thursday night, but Yugoslav radio stations continued to broadcast protest reports interspersed with patriotic music.

Britain and the United States announced that they are turning over to Italy zone A, including the port city of Trieste, which their troops have occupied since the free territory was established after the Second World War. The 4,000 American and 3,000 British soldiers now on duty there are to be withdrawn and replaced with Italian troops "as soon as practicable," it was announced.

The U.S. state department explained: "It is the firm belief of the two governments that this step will contribute to the stabilization of a situation which has disturbed Italy-Yugoslav relations in recent years."
